LIFE UTAH
ELEVATED

GET MORE MOUNTAIN TIME™
ONLY IN UTAH

Unlike many destinations that require a lot of driving, Utah has 10 world-class resorts within one hour of Salt Lake City International Airport. And with daily flights from most major cities, advance planning isn't always mandatory.

That means less driving, hassle, and distractions.

Which means more skiing, relaxing, and whatever else you dream up.

MORE DEEP DAYS MORE FAMILY TIME

With over 11 feet of snow blanketing the Tetons since January 1, 2020, conditions at Jackson Hole Mountain Resort are some of the snowiest of all time. 134 inches of snow has fallen on the upper mountain since the start of the new year, and current base depths of 91 inches make this January the deepest on record to date in the resort's history. With 272 inches of total snow season to date, Jackson Hole is amongst the leading North American resorts for snowfall.

"We're in the flow," stated JHMR Vice President of Operations Tim Mason. He went on to note, "I'm impressed by the virility and sustained nature of this storm cycle, and how our staff have responded to it. We have worked tirelessly to ensure the parking lots are plowed, buses are running, and the mountain opens in a timely and safe manner. Not to mention the skiing has been incredible; this is a January for the record books."

Meteorologist Chris Tomer gives us the run down on where will be the snowiest this weekend, 1/14-1/17. The hot spots this week are the Pacific Northwest and the Northeast.

Pacific Northwest
The atmospheric river comes to an end on Thursday. But, smaller storm systems are lined-up. One on Friday and another on Sunday with light to moderate snow accumulation. Snow levels were high during the atmospheric river with high density snowfall on the highest volcanoes and highest Cascades.

Banff
The atmospheric river comes to an end on Thursday. Thursday is probably the best powder day of the
